U.S. Olympic coach Billie Jean King is scheduled to name her Olympic team this week. Many are assuming King is going to name Lindsay Davenport's doubles partner, Corina Morariu, to the team. This choice would exclude Serena Williams, while her sister, Venus, is already named to the squad. If chosen, the Williams sister would become the U.S. Olympic doubles team. After all, together they have won three Grand Slam doubles titles, including Wimbledon 2000.

Venus Matches Gibson, Wins Wimbledon Title

ITS BEEN A LONG TIME: When Venus Williams beat Lindsay Davenport, she became the first African-American since Althea Gibson in 1957 and 1958 to win the valued Wimbledon single's title. Along the way Venus beat No. 1 Martina Hingis, her sister, Serena and Davenport.

GETTING IT DONE: Venus' athlete ability, power and newly shown finesses, served her well on her journey to her first single's Grand Slam title.

Sporting Stein's Way

Richard Williams guides daughters, Venus and Serena, to the pinnacle of the tennis world

Sometimes our deepest dreams actually become reality!! How many fathers or mothers have factually predicted the destiny of their offspring?? We can all plot or project our hopes or dreams for our sons or daughters; yet, bringing those projections to fruition are the stuff legends are made of!

One man, in particular, on today's giant sporting stage, has actualized the seemingly impossible . . . his name is Richard Williams.

LELAND STEIN III

At the $12.6 million Wimbledon tennis championships at the All England Lawn Tennis and Croquet Club, Richard and his wife, Oracene, watched the impossible become the possible as Venus became the first African-American woman to win the prestigious Wimbledon single's title since the legendary Althea Gibson accomplished the feat in 1957 and 1958.

Venus defeated defending champion Lindsay Davenport in the final, 6-3, 7-6 (7-3).

"It's really a privilege for me to win this Wimbledon while she's (Gibson) still alive," Venus, 20, said. "I appreciate how hard it was for her. You realize that not everyone wants you to win . . . not everyone is going to support you . . . and that's OK."

London proved to be fruitful, as the aces just kept on coming for big sister and younger sister, Serena, 18, as they followed up Venus' historic win by beating Ai Sugiyama and Julie Halard-Decugis 6-3, 6-2 to become the first sister tandem to capture the women's doubles championship.

Despite his daughters glowing and rare success, to many, Richard's name invokes a stream of negative connotations.

The opposition and criticism of Richard is a "heard-it-through-the-grapevine" type of activism. By that I mean, many are just repeating or rehashing old-time perceptions. Many still can't overcome the fact Richard did not sell his daughters to the USTA Junior Circuit at the tender ages of 12, 13 or 14 - it must be noted that over 90 percent of the top male and female tennis players played on the Junior circuit.

Sure Richard has implemented unconventional methods, or should I say, wise methods like: ensuring his daughters attend high school or slowly integrating them into the rigors of the WTA Tour's circuitous schedule or maintaining strong family devotions.

When I hear the negative talk about Richard, I can't help but cringe. We all have a choice as to how we are going to perceive any situation. The good deeds of a great person far out weight his or hers personal shortcomings. Who in fair conscience can continued to focus on any minute differences Richard brings to the pristine tennis table?

I tend to focus on the good deeds each of us bring to the table. In Richard's case, he should be the poster boy for persistence, continuance, vision, fatherhood, sacrifice and teaching.

After all, his girls have already won three Grand Slam doubles titles together - the 1999 U.S. Open and French Open, along with the 2000 Wimbledon title. They also have two Grand Slam mixed doubles titles apiece. Most importantly, Serena and Venus each have one Grand Slam single's title in the family bag - Serena has the 1999 U.S. Open single's trophy and Venus, of course, rounded out the family silverware with the 2000 Wimbledon single's title.

"We're both going to try to get as much as we can," Venus said. "We're both really greedy," added Serena.

The Williamses, when one reflects or tries to understand where they started, can better grasp their need to push hard and with purpose.

Richard Williams, who grew up picking cotton in Louisiana, knew nothing about tennis when he set out to make his daughters champions. He bought a book on the game, studied pictures of the proper strokes, read advice in magazines and set about to teach Venus and Serena on public courts when they were little more than toddlers in Compton. Richard noted that the first courts his daughters played on did not have nets.

Richard and Oracene have shown their offspring that one doesn't need nets, money, the Junior Tour or expensive tennis facilities to be the best they can be. At the heart of Venus' and Serena's self-confidence is a sense that anything is possible, that any goal can be achieved with enough hard work - their self-assured attitude was surely born from the streets of Compton, where it's do or die.

Venus' and Serena's showing at Wimbledon was miraculous to say the least. Venus was playing in only her fourth tournament this year after being sidelined for six months with tendinitis in both wrists. While Serena had a two-month layoff with tendinitis in her knee.

"It's really amazing for us to come back like this," said Serena, who lost a heart breaker to Venus in the semifinals. "People are going to practice harder to beat us. But you know what? We are too. We mean business."

"We can do a lot better. We're not playing our best tennis right now. There's a lot of room for improvement."

Next target? The next Grand Slam, of course.

"For me, the U.S. Open," Venus said. "For me, too," said Serena, who will defend her title when the tournament opens in late August.

The sisters are also determined to compete for the No. 1 ranking. When Serena joined the tour in 1998, Venus predicted they would be ranked 1-2 by the end of the year, but it hasn't happened yet. Venus will move up to No. 3 this week behind Martina Hingis and Davenport, tying her career best. Serena will rise to No. 7.

"We've had a few hurdles to jump, as far as injuries and consistency go," Venus said. "But we're on our way."

I've watched the sisters at a number of WTA tournaments, as they stated, to the consternation of the media and rival players, that they would one day be fighting for the number one ranking. Their interjection was always taken as a boast.

I've always taken their projections as a positive.

Said Venus: "If we don't feel like we can win or compete with the best on the Tour, then why are we out here? We are not out here just to be here. Our goal is to be the best we can be, and we believe our best will take us to the top."

The Williamses challenge for the future will be to keep the family intact. As the two ascend upward, they most likely will face each other as the did in the tense Wimbledon semifinals. It will take all of Richard's and Oracene's cajoling to ensure Venus and Serena keep family matters at the forefront of their lives as they continue to embark on their historic tennis journey.

Double XXposure Grooms Hip Hop's Elite

Angelo Ellerbee

By Rickerby Hinds

With hip hop music's ascent to the top selling spot on the American music scene its artists have become more visible, and with this their actions more closely observed and scrutinized by fans as well as critics.

Many of these artists, against their will, have also been put in the position of being considered role models by their hoards of young fans; a label that sits unsteadily on the heads of some who are simultaneously being bombarded with charges that their lyrics promote gratuitous violence, denigrate women and promote drinking and illegal drug use.

Enter Double XXposure, a New York based PR and Artist Development Company, and it's founder and CEO Angelo Ellerbee. If he had his way we would see re-emergence of the Motown management machine that gave us The Supremes, Smokey Robinson and The Miracles, and The Temptations among others.

Ellerbee's goal is "to educate, stimulate and motivate the young Black people coming into the music industry." This education, Ellerbee hopes, will eliminate among other things, incidents of artists "threatening and shooting record label people."

Giving his artists an understanding of the record industry is another of Double XXposure's primary goals. "The music industry is a lending institution, a bank. Everything you get from them you're gonna have to give back."

Ellerbee goes as far as suggesting that artists should "Get a lawyer to watch their lawyer," as a way of avoiding having the industry take advantage of them. He suggest that they find young people coming out of law schools wanting to go into entertainment law and offer them a percentage of future earnings.

Double XXposure hires highly trained professionals with skills in everything from etiquette and social interaction to industry terminology and choreography in order to give their artists a well-rounded perspective as well as longevity in their careers.

With a roster of clients that includes Rome, Ginuwine and one of hip hop's most notorious MCs DMX, Ellerbee has his work cut out for him. Hip hop music has endured much criticism since it's beginning, but even more in the past few years.

With the death of Tupac Shakur and the Notorious B.I.G., the emergence of Lil Kim and Foxy Brown and weapons charges galore, the hip hop generation of artists would seem to be in desperate need of the type of guidance that, Ellerbee so enthusiastically promotes.

"Labels and management are often so busy focusing on the bottom line, the record sales, the chart positions, that the personal and professional development of the artist is left to chance... Someone must take the time to prepare them, to help them through their transition from anonymity to stardom." Ellerbee said.

There is a need, according to Ellerbee, to recover our young people, "we've allowed the music industry to rob and rape our young artist today through nudity and violence," he said, adding that "once you take your clothes off there's no tricks left under your sleeve."

WATER WARS! IS THE END IN SIGHT?

After 36 years, a truce has been called in the Water War between the people of the East San Bernardino Valley and the Metropolitan Water District of Southern California. As a result, for the first time, the East Valley's water surpluses can become the financial asset they were one day destined to be. This will allow major investments to be made throughout our region, without raising taxes. Below, the full story is told.

1. The Battlefield

✓East Valley Sits Atop A 1,000 Foot Deep Underground Lake

How can the East Valley be rich in water, when it looks like a coastal desert?

Our area is crossed at a diagonal by the San Jacinto earthquake fault. It runs from roughly Cajon Pass, under San Bernardino Valley College, under the I-215 & I-10 freeway interchange and continues into the hills behind Loma Linda and Redlands. Where this fault crosses the Santa Ana River, it acts like a natural underground dam.

For centuries, as water has drained from the San Bernardino Mountains and the eastern end of the San Gabriel Mountains, it has moved down the Santa Ana River and Lytle Creek channels. Most of this flow is underground and invisible. When it hits the San Jacinto Fault, it runs into a natural dyke. This forms the 1,000 foot deep underground lake in the Bunker Hill Basin below Hospitality Lane, Inland Center, the freeway interchange and downtown San Bernardino.

This lake is our key source of surplus water.

✓East Valley's Underground Water Is An Asset ... And A Threat

Having a 1,000 foot deep lake under such key economic assets as Hospitality Lane, Inland Center, the I-10 and I-215 freeway interchange and the offices in downtown San Bernardino presents problems for our area. The surface of the lake lies just below ground level and sometimes rises to flood the buildings above it. We had a near miss in 1999, partly due to El Nino.

In the past, jobs were lost when the former South "E" Street Post Office and an Orange Show Road theater were permanently closed due to flooding. Also, in a strong earthquake, liquefaction from this high ground water could cause the collapse of buildings or the I-10 freeway interchange.

Our region thus has an interest in lowering this high ground water level and selling the excess water.

✓Met Moves To Take Control Of The EastValley's Water

Throughout the 20th Century, Met and its affiliates have successfully acquired water rights throughout the West. For example, the LA Department of Water and Power drained the Owens Valley. Met obtain rights to Colorado River Water including the excess not used by other Western States. Met acquired rights to a major share of the water from the California State Water Project.

By 1964, Met had convinced most of the East Valley's established leaders that the area should join their system and let Met manage the region's water assets. In 1964, they scheduled an election to bring about the transfer of control.

✓Holcomb Wins The War To Keep Local Control Of Water

Those who experienced the 1964 election remember it as the toughest in the EastValley's long and colorful history.

Former San Bernardino Mayor Bob Holcomb, whose family had helped settle San Bernardino County, became convinced that the region's surplus water was far too value to be controlled from Los Angeles. In a coastal desert, access to water could decide the community's fate and that power needed to be kept in local hands. Besides, he and his allies believed that the region's underground surplus water was the key to the EastValley's long term prosperity just as underground oil had built Long Beach.

In what many saw as an unexpected outcome, over 60% of the public agreed with Holcomb's position.

Today, the farsightedness of those who fought the 1964 election is evident. The region controls more than enough water to handle its own growth. Southern California is thirsty and the region has one of the few untapped sources of supply. BUT ...

2. The Skirmishes!

✓Met Able To Prevent East Valley Water Sales

Two natural resources have been crucial to Southern California's development: water and oil. The East Valley is blessed with an abundant water supply. In the 1964 election, the area's voters decided to retain local control of their water by not joining the Met system. However, a commodity only has financial value if it can be sold. And here, Met has held most of the cards.

Outside the East Valley, every major Southern California jurisdiction is part of the Met system and receives most of its water through its pipes and canals. Even if a local agency wanted to buy the East Valley's surplus water, Met was positioned to either deny access or charge very high fees for use of their delivery system.

As a result, though the East Valley has had abundant water for 36 years, there has been no place to sell it.

✓East Valley Gets Separate Rights To State Water Project Water ... Gets Rights To Sell Any Surplus

Meanwhile, the East Valley was securing rights to more water. When the State Water Project came on line in 1972, the region's independence meant it received its own share of state water for joining the system. Today, and in the future, this amounts to 102,600 acre feet a year. However, because the area is rich in native water, it has not needed most of this quota. In the 1990s, for instance, the average delivery has only been 7,600 acre feet ... leaving 95,000 acre feet a year available for sale.

However, the State of California ruled that the SB Valley Municipal Water District, which manages the East Valley's water, could not sell this surplus on the open market. They wanted the rights to the surplus returned to the state for $6-$11 per acre foot. This, however, was not the district's understanding of the terms on which it joined the state system. A lawsuit ensued.

In 1997, this suit was settled in favor of the East Valley. The area can thus sell its state water at market rates.

✓Fighting For The Right To Deliver Water In Met Areas

As the last 36 years have passed, conditions in Southern California's water markets have tightened. As a result, some of the areas in the Met system want to buy water from the East Valley at what they consider to be reasonable prices. Meanwhile, the East Valley continues to need markets for water it wants to pump from the underground lake that threatens Hospitality Lane, Inland Center, the I-10 & I-15 Interchange and downtown San Bernardino.

As Met claimed the right to stop the East Valley from selling surplus state water in their system, the SB Valley Municipal Water District filed sued to gain that right. Meanwhile, Met sued the district to stop it from selling some of its surplus water to a private company intent upon marketing it in Met's system. Both of these lawsuits are pending. However, they are being suspended by both sides in light of the chance for a LONG TERM TRUCE IN THE WATER WARS.

3. The Truce!

✓East Valley Still Wants To Sell Water

As the 21st Century begins, the East Valley still has a need to reduce the high water levels threatening Hospitality Lane, Inland Center, the I-10 interchange and downtown San Bernardino. The region also needs money to build a wide variety of infrastructure projects including the expansion of the Baseline Feeder that brings water to Colton, Rialto and parts of Fontana; the expansion of the Foothill Feeder to Yucaipa; and the construction of additional infrastructure in San Bernardino to manage surplus water.

✓Met Needs New Water Supplies & Has Leadership Change

At the same time, Met finds itself facing a growing demand for water just when it is losing some sources of supply. In the Owens Valley, lawsuits have reduced the amount of water available to the L.A. Department of Water & Power. Met must make up the difference. Arizona and Nevada are starting to use their full Colorado River allocations and Met is losing access to their unused water. Political and environmental constraints are limiting the growth of Northern California water available to Met. As a result, Met must find new sources of water supply for the sake of the long term reliability of its system.

At this crucial moment, Met has undergone a change of leadership and philosophy. The new leadership is clearly more interested in solving water questions than perpetuating old animosities.

✓Met To Buy Some East Valley Surplus State Water

In these new conditions, Met and the SB Valley Municipal Water District have agreed to declare a one year truce to 36-years of Water Warfare to see if they can develop a long term working relationship. Under the cautious agreement, Met will buy 15,000 acre feet of the East Valley's surplus State Water Project water for $150-$200 an acre foot. That is far above the $6-$11 an acre foot offered by the State. Also, Met will not object to allowing the Valley District to deliver 10,000 acre feet of excess native water to the Orange County Water District. The two sides will stall their lawsuits over the East Valley's attempts to sell into the Met system, and the suits will be dropped as unnecessary if they can develop a long term agreement.

These measures will raise $4.1 million for the SB Valley Municipal Water District that will be used for infrastructure projects.

✓Truce Will Reduce East Valley's High Ground Water

As an added benefit, the manner in which the sale to Met will be executed will lower the ground water threat in south San Bernardino. The 15,000 acre feet of surplus state water being sold to Met will be delivered to them at the Devil Canyon after-bay near Cal State San Bernardino. It will be poured on to the high ground along the base of the San Bernardino Mountains above the valley's driest wells, making them more effective and lowering their pumping costs. In exchange, 25,000 acre feet of water will be pumped out of the underground flood zone with 15,000 going to Met and 10,000 to the Orange County Water District.

✓Truce Shows The Wisdom Of The 1964 Election

In one fell swoop, the truce with Met turns the East Valley's excess state water rights into a financial asset for the taxpayers, lowers the water level in the area's underground flood plain, and puts water, as needed, into the area's driest and most expensive wells. This negotiation shows the foresight of the 1964 election as it has allowed the East Valley to stand before Met as an equal with surplus water to sell, at a time when Met's long term need is rising and their traditional sources of supply are stagnating or shrinking.

to that." Halstead again asked for the missing discovery. "I have gotten nothing but stonewalling from the D A's office," he said.

At this hearing, the issue also involved money, specifically for the tapes, which run at $45 a piece, even though the edited version was available at no cost. "We can't give out discovery for free," Hestrin said. Halstead was required to pay the money for the videos before they could be distributed to him, said the District Attorney's office. However, defendant Michael Molver had paid for copies of several videos the previous week, and had not received them from the District Attorney's office, as of this court date, even though the prosecution had assured him that they were on rush order.

Four defendants appeared in front of the judge pro tem. They each gave him the dates they wished to reappear. The prosecutor gave his preferred dates, and they were ordered to reappear on July 24. The prosecution will enter a motion to combine the four defendants, all who still lack legal representation, into one trial which will be scheduled at that date. It's been four months and the District Attorney's office is chomping at the bit to bring this episode to a tidy resolution. And the prospect of trying 19 different trials, is a nightmare it wishes not to face, if it can be avoided, even if that means combining cases involving defendants charged with different crimes, into one proceeding.

As to a separate mystery, known as the case of the missing attorneys, the pro tem judge of the moment told the defendants that "two weeks is enough time to find a lawyer." Given the fact that many lawyers in this county refused to take these cases so as to "not burn their bridges," three months has not been adequate time for the majority of the defendants to obtain council for this case.

The later visit to the District Attorney's office failed to bear any fruit, or any of the missing tapes, despite orders from two different courtrooms to make them available to Halstead. If they truly are sitting on a shelf, gathering dust and waiting to be discovered, why can't they be found and delivered? At the end of the telephone conversation with one of the harried prosecutors regarding the elusive tapes, the receptionist finally told Halstead with a sigh, "he says you're crazy."

Despite the posted ethics code, despite the promises of justice and fair play for both victims and criminals from the attorney for the people of Riverside County, the case of the missing discovery must remain open, and ongoing. And what of the missing minutes on the tapes? Totaled up together, they likely surpass in duration the 18 minutes which mysteriously disappeared off the Nixon tapes during Watergate. What doesn't the prosecution want the defendants or their prospective juries to see?

As 18 of us who are charged with disorderly conduct and other offenses for praying on the 91 freeway await trial, we think of the likely outcome, which is that we live in a city where police officers who murder a young Black woman unconscious in her aunt's car will walk free, but those who protest their actions may occupy jail cells in their stead. Statues dedicated to heroic civil rights leaders, and multicultural festivals one day a year cannot erase the reality of racism in our justice system and in our city. The District Attorneys office has spent over eight months investigating us, charging us and prosecuting us in court. It spent a scant four months investigating a hate crime committed by police officers who celebrated after the fact and came up empty handed, an eloquent example of skewed priorities at work. Such is the state of affairs in Riverside, in the summer of 2000, only 1 1/2 years after the death of Tyisha Miller.
